FIND A
HAPPY MEDIUM
BETWEEN RUSTIC
AND REFINED.

An eclectic sensibility can sometimes be a challenge for a designer—how to balance a client’s love for both modern design and a more rustic palette? In this Calgary powder room, designer Stephanie Brown created an elegant space that finds that happy medium. As an ode to reclaimed barn board—one of the client’s loves—Brown opted for new tongue and groove wood panelling on the walls, stained a taupey grey to achieve that vintage tone. To “dress it up a little more,” says Brown, she paired it with a pretty, subtly patterned and slightly metallic wallpaper. The marble vanity brings in that bit of modern the client loves, and polished nickel accents throughout add a touch of sparkle. And, in a bit of design mastery, a slightly awkwardly placed window looks like it was always meant to be there, with the vanity mirror fitted right up against it.
